This activity gives your students the opportunity to focus on their observation and questioning skills. You can bring this to the Museum or use as a post-visit activity.

At the Museum: Duplicate this sheet and have your students bring a copy to the Museum. Pick one exhibit area, and ask your students to spend time interacting with one experience. As they explore, ask them to jot down interesting things they observe in the / Notice box. Questions that pop into their mind while they explore can be noted in the / Wonder box. Once you return to the classroom, groups can share the observations and questions they recorded.

Post-visit Activity: This activity can also be used as a culminating experience and be given once they return to the classroom.
